Will Dallimore and John Dallimore

a bashful films production

When the Badsey Society asked Will Dallimore to make a short film to fill a gap in their AGM schedule ...

... little did they know that they may have spawned a MONSTER!

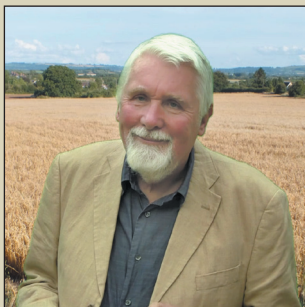

Doug Deep, a creation of Will Dallimore, roams the Vale of Evesham on a two-tine fork in his quest to educate the villagers in the art of Asum Grammar.

Asum Grammar is a dialect used by the older inhabitants of the Vale and is named after the colloquial name for Evesham, 'Asum'.

Such was the reception to this first film at its showing in St James' Church in Badsey in February 2013 that a second film was commissioned.

This time it was the Social Committee of the church that sought the help of this intrepid local adventurer to make a film for their Harvest Supper. So Doug Deep got another chance to fly around the local countryside.

The first film was solely a vehicle for Doug Deep to strut his stuff. Stories, anecdotes and a song feature alongside some scary flying scenes in a uniquely humorous way.

However, the second film enabled Doug Deep to include others in his madcap adventures. The theme of 'the harvest' helped in the introduction of characters like 'The Farmer', a nursery-rhyme telling yokel. Crop circles also feature, with a hilarious sketch involving the anonymous 'Doris'.

The ladies of the choir are not left out, and sing a children's harvest song, whilst Doug Deep and his backing group, The Diggers, sing a spoof version of Melanie's 'Brand New Key'.
